A Time for Prayer

By Ben Rominske, minister

Monday night football might be a broadcast you hardly watch, one you tune in for every week, or only when it is “your” team playing. Not too far away from us, on Monday, January 2nd, the Buffalo Bills and the Cincinnati Bengals were playing football. A regular end of season game turned tragic when a player collapsed suddenly and became unresponsive. This young man was tended to by medical staff and taken to a hospital in Cincinnati and was in critical care.

I tell you about this incident because of the response I have seen on the internet. Players and coaches across football have been asked their thoughts on the matter. The young man’s name, concern of his condition, and his attempts to give back have soared to heights that were probably never expected. It didn’t matter which team you cheered for instead people overall were simply worried about this man’s health.

The response of fans, coaches, and players have a few words in common: our thoughts and prayers. It seems that a larger number of people do not want to align with any religion, let alone Christianity. I find it so interesting to see support found in people offering such things as prayer and thoughts. While some try to not “offend” with how they express support it cannot be denied that situations like this draw many eyes.

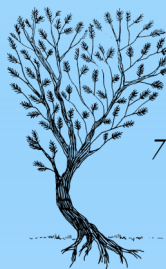

James 5:16 says, “Therefore, confess your sins to one another and pray for one another, that you may be healed. The prayer of a righteous person has great power as it is working.” If there’s one thing we can do in today’s culture it is offer prayers. As we move forward in life, let us use our avenues of prayer to petition the Creator and Great Healer and let people know when you pray for them. It is a quick gesture that can go such a long way.
